Commentary

The Africa Fund, returning 12.1% in September, continued to rise dramatically along with the South African stockmarket, with the Fund and benchmark FTSE/JSE Africa All Share Index up 40.5% and 36.7% respectively for the year-to-date. While the strong performance of South African stocks seems to have become the norm of late, what was notable this month was the particularly strong performance of resources stocks, which represented nine of the Fund's top ten performers. While we believe the market as a whole is approaching fair value, and would not be surprised to see a consolidation or correction from recent levels, we do continue to find attractive opportunities for the Fund, particularly in the under-appreciated resources sector. With the rand-sensitive resource stocks long out-of-favor, consistent accumulation now leaves the Fund positioned for a weakening rand and margin deterioration in the consumer-sensitive stocks, both of which we believe are likely.
