Commentary

Receiving takeover offers for shares held by the Fund should be a natural consequence of our investment approach. We expect that if we see attractive long-term fundamental value in the Fund's holdings, private equity firms or acquisitive companies will also. In October, Hagemeyer, a large European electrical equipment distributor and a long-time Fund position, was the latest example, receiving two buy-out offers. Both bids have been rejected by the company. Hagemeyer has been a very rewarding investment for the Fund over the years and we think we have come to know the company very well, and expect the Fund to continue to profit on the shares into the future. We believe that management have acted in the best interests of all stakeholders in the past and at present in response to the two offers, so they have our continued support in their efforts to maximise shareholder value. We will, naturally, continue to re-evaluate in light of any future news and price moves.
