

Orbis Emerging Markets Equity

Emerging markets increasingly have a concentration problem.

A passive investor buying the MSCI Emerging Markets Index today is not buying a diversified collection of businesses, spread across the developing world's most promising economies. They are, in large part, buying a bet on semiconductors and artificial intelligence—concentrated in a handful of companies in Taiwan and Korea whose combined weight in the index has grown to levels that may give any prudent portfolio manager pause.

Emerging market indices look increasingly like a bet on a single theme

Weight of top-ten shares in the MSCI Emerging Markets Index

Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Co. (TSMC) alone now accounts for over 15% of the MSCI Emerging Markets Index. The top ten names account for more than 40% of the entire index, with eight of those ten—TSMC, Samsung Electronics (including preference shares), SK Hynix, Mediatek, Delta Electronics, SK Square and Hon Hai Precision—all players in the AI infrastructure buildout. The index thus provides an illusion of broad geographical diversification. In reality, a passive investor buying EM exposure today is making a concentrated wager on the AI investment cycle, dressed up as a diversified allocation to the developing world.

In recent months, that concentration has been both driven and fed by extraordinary returns. The race to build out data centre capacity has created a voracious demand for semiconductor chips, turbocharging the earnings and share prices of the companies that make them. The impact of this AI rally has been stark: just those eight mega-cap AI-related names account for 90 percent of the index returns so far in 2026.

To be clear, this is not a criticism of these businesses—far from it. TSMC is the largest holding in the Orbis Emerging Markets Strategy and Samsung Electronics is also a top-five position. We think both are excellent businesses—well deserving of their place in your portfolio, and still attractively valued despite the recent sharp increase in share prices.

Like every share in the portfolio, the position sizing of these names is driven by our conviction in each stock's risk-adjusted return profile, weighed up against the opportunities available elsewhere. We pay little attention to a stock's weight in the benchmark.

But despite owning both TSMC and Samsung, the levels of concentration in the index and the outstanding relative performance of AI-related stocks has meant the Strategy has lagged its benchmark so far this year. While underperformance can be uncomfortable, we believe that being highly selective—building a concentrated portfolio of excellent businesses with diversified drivers of returns—gives us the best chance of delivering attractive long-term returns for our clients. Our portfolio today reflects that conviction.

We own a collection of businesses, selected not because of their index weight but because of the quality of their competitive positions, the integrity of their management, and the price at which their shares are available. Some of those businesses are large. Others are absent from most investors' radars, tucked into corners of the index that passive flows have largely ignored. What they share is that we understand them, we trust the people who run them, and we believe we are paying a price that is below what they are genuinely worth to own them. Crucially, where they differ is in what each business needs to go right to deliver returns.

We own TSMC and Samsung, and for those holdings returns are indeed tied, in part, to the AI investment cycle. Both are central to the global semiconductor industry and are exceptionally well positioned within their respective segments. We are comfortable with that exposure at the valuations we paid. Beyond those holdings, however, the portfolio looks very different from the index.

Consider Nu Holdings. Nu is a Brazilian digital bank whose fortunes are tied to financial inclusion in Latin America, the Brazilian interest-rate cycle, and its ability to underwrite consumer credit at scale responsibly. It serves more than 135 million customers across Brazil, Mexico and Colombia, and continues to take share from incumbent banks that have historically underserved consumers.

While also a financial services business, Estonian-founded payments company Wise is different again. Its opportunity lies in taking share from incumbent banks in cross-border payments. Despite offering a faster, cheaper and more transparent service, Wise's market share remains small relative to the size of the addressable market. Its future depends far more on customer adoption than on AI spending, semiconductor demand or broader economic growth.

Our two largest Chinese holdings—Tencent and NetEase—both in the Media & Entertainment sector, demonstrate the diversification on offer, even within a single country's sector. Tencent's prospects are tied primarily to digital advertising, fintech and the monetisation of its ecosystem. NetEase's depend on its ability to continue developing successful games and allocating capital prudently. Both are Chinese media businesses, but they are reliant on very different drivers to be successful.

Jardine Matheson provides yet another source of differentiated returns. Its fortunes are tied to Asian consumer spending, Indonesian infrastructure activity, Hong Kong commercial property and the capital-allocation decisions of a family-controlled owner with an unusually long time horizon. Those drivers bear little resemblance to the factors influencing semiconductor demand or AI investment.

AI investment. Brazilian financial inclusion. Cross-border payments. Chinese digital advertising and gaming. Hong Kong office rents. Indonesian infrastructure. These businesses need very different things to go right. They serve different customers, operate in different currencies, and are managed by people with different incentives and time horizons.

That, to us, is genuine diversification. Not simply a large number of stocks spread across multiple countries, but a collection of businesses whose long-term outcomes are driven by fundamentally different factors. Periods of underperformance are uncomfortable, but for portfolios built with little regard for index weights, they are inevitable in environments where a narrow group of stocks drives market returns.

The portfolio today trades at roughly 11 times this year's estimated earnings—at close to a 20% discount to the index. Yet we believe our businesses and the entrepreneurs who run them are, on average, of higher quality than the index as a whole: stronger competitive positions, better balance sheets, higher returns on equity and more attractive long-term growth prospects. In our view, that discount reflects areas of the market where sentiment remains weak, not businesses whose long-term prospects have deteriorated.

Emerging markets indices increasingly have a concentration problem. For passive investors, that is simply the hand they are dealt. For us, it is a reminder of why we invest the way we do—selecting businesses one at a time, on their own merits, without regard for what the index tells us to own. The portfolio that results looks different from the index, performs differently from the index, and is valued differently from the index. In our experience, that difference—a focused collection of good businesses bought at attractive prices—is precisely what creates the conditions for strong long-term returns.

Fund Objective and Benchmark

The Fund seeks higher returns than the average of the equity stock markets of the world’s emerging market countries, without greater risk of loss. The MSCI Emerging Markets Index, including income, net of withholding taxes, is the Fund’s benchmark (the “MSCI Emerging Markets Index”).

How We Aim to Achieve the Fund’s Objective/Adherence to Objective

The Fund is actively managed and is designed to be exposed to all of the risks and rewards of selected Emerging Market equities. The Fund expects to be not less than 90% invested in Emerging Market equity and equity-linked investments. The Fund identifies Emerging Market equity and equity-linked investments as those investments that are issued by a corporate body or other entity domiciled or primarily located in a country represented in the MSCI Emerging Markets Index or the MSCI Frontier Markets Index (together, “Emerging Markets”), traded or listed on an exchange in an Emerging Market or issued by a corporate body or other entity whose business is significantly linked to Emerging Markets. These equities are selected using extensive proprietary investment research. Orbis devotes a substantial proportion of its business efforts to detailed “bottom up” investment research conducted with a long-term perspective, believing that such research makes superior long-term performance attainable. The lower the price of a share as compared to its assessed intrinsic value, the more attractive Orbis considers the equity’s fundamental value. The Investment Manager believes that over the long term, equity investing based on this approach offers superior returns and reduces the risk of loss. The Fund may, to the extent permitted by its investment restrictions, also periodically hold cash and cash equivalents when Orbis believes this to be consistent with the Fund’s investment objective.

Exchange rate fluctuations significantly influence global investment returns. For this reason, part of Orbis’ research effort is devoted to forecasting currency trends. Taking into account these expected trends, Orbis actively reviews the Fund’s currency exposure, focusing, in particular, on managing the Fund’s exposure to those currencies considered less likely to hold their long-term value.

The Fund does not seek to mirror the MSCI Emerging Markets Index and may deviate meaningfully from it in pursuit of superior long-term capital appreciation.

The net returns of the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) from its inception on 14 May 2020, stitched with the net returns of the Investor Share Class from the Fund’s inception to 14 May 2020, have outperformed the stitched Performance Fee Benchmarks of the respective classes. The Fund will experience periods of underperformance in pursuit of its long-term objective.

Risk/Reward Profile

- The Fund is aimed at investors who are seeking a portfolio the objective of which is to be invested in, and exposed to, Emerging Market securities.
- Investments in the Fund may suffer capital loss.
- Investors should understand that the Investment Manager generally assesses an equity investment’s attractiveness using a three-to-five year time horizon.

Management Fee

As is described in more detail in the Fund’s Prospectus, the Fund’s various share classes bear different management fees. The fees are designed to align the Manager’s and Investment Manager’s interests with those of investors in the Fund.

The Shared Investor RRF Class (A)’s management fee is charged as follows:

- Base Fee: Calculated and accrued daily at a rate of 0.8% per annum of the Class’ net asset value. Investors separately pay an administrative fee directly to Allan Gray Proprietary Limited or one of its affiliates. The Investment Manager or one of its affiliates is entitled to receive a separate fee from Allan Gray Proprietary Limited or one of its affiliates in connection with this administrative fee, related to services the Investment Manager and its affiliates provide to Allan Gray Proprietary Limited or its affiliates.
- Refundable Performance Fee: When the performance of the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) (after deducting the Base Fee and an additional 0.3% per annum, which is deemed to be representative of the aforementioned administrative fee) beats the Performance Fee Benchmark over the period from one dealing day to the next, 25% of the value of the outperformance is paid into a reserve and reinvested into the Fund. If the value of the reserve is positive on any dealing day, the Investment Manager is entitled to a performance fee in an amount capped at the lesser of an annualised rate of (a) one-third of the reserve’s net asset value and (b) 2.5% of the net asset value of the Shared Investor RRF Class (A). Fees paid from the reserve to the Investment Manager are not available to be refunded as described below.

When the performance of the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) (after deducting the Base Fee and the aforementioned additional 0.3% per annum) trails the Performance Fee Benchmark over the period from one dealing day to the next, 25% of the value of the underperformance is refunded from the reserve to the Shared Investor RRF Class (A). If at any time sufficient value does not exist in the reserve to provide the refund, a reserve recovery mark is set, and subsequent underperformance is tracked. Such relative losses must be recovered before any outperformance results in any payment to the reserve.

Prior to 9 Feb 2023, the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) charged the fee that the Investor Share Class would have charged, reduced by 0.3% per annum. Numerous investors switched to the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) from the Investor Share Class. This temporary measure ensured that the fees paid by investors accounted for underperformance experienced by the Investor Share Class before the inception date of the Shared Investor RRF Class (A).

Please review the Fund’s prospectus for additional detail and for a description of the management fee borne by the Fund’s other share classes.

Fees, Expenses and Total Expense Ratio (TER)

The relevant class within the Fund bears all expenses payable by such class, which shall include but not be limited to fees payable to its Manager, Investment Manager and additional service providers, fees and expenses involved in registering and maintaining governmental registrations, taxes, duties and all other operating expenses, including the cost of buying and selling assets.

Where an investor subscribes or redeems an amount representing 5% or more of the net asset value of the Fund, the Manager may cause the Fund to levy a fee of 0.75% of the net asset value of the Fund’s shares being acquired or redeemed.

The annual management fees charged are included in the TER. The TER is a measure of the actual expenses incurred by the Class over a 12 month period, excluding trading costs. Since Fund and Class returns are quoted after deduction of these expenses, the TER should not be deducted from the published returns. Expenses may vary, so the current TER is not a reliable indicator of future TERs.

Notes to Help You Understand This Report

Certain capitalised terms are defined in the Glossary section of the Orbis Funds' respective Prospectuses, copies of which are available upon request from Allan Gray Unit Trust Management (RF) Proprietary Limited, a Member of the Association for Savings & Investments SA. The country and currency classification for securities follows that of third-party providers for comparability purposes. Emerging Markets follows MSCI classification when available and includes Frontier Markets. Emerging Markets currency exposure is based on currency denomination. Based on a number of factors including the location of the underlying business, Orbis may consider a security's classification to be different and manage the Funds' exposures accordingly. Totals presented in this Report may not sum due to rounding. The Fund does not seek to mirror the investment universe of the Benchmark and is thus not constrained by the Benchmark's composition.

Risk measures are ex-post and calculated on a monthly return series. Drawdowns occur when the cumulative return of the Fund drops below its preceding peak. Months to recovery measures the number of months from the preceding peak in performance to recovery of that level of performance.

Beta compares the sensitivity of the periodic returns of a fund to those of an index. A beta of 1.0 implies that a percentage move in the index has been reflected by a similar percentage move in the fund, on average. A beta higher than 1.0 implies that a fund has proportionally more exposure to market volatility than the index.

Annualised Monthly Volatility measures the variability of monthly returns, adjusted to reflect an annual level. A higher value suggests greater volatility and risk, while a lower value indicates more stable returns.

Tracking error is a measure of the difference between a fund's return and the return of its benchmark. Low tracking error indicates that the fund is closely following its benchmark. High tracking error indicates the opposite.

12 month portfolio turnover for the Orbis Equity and Multi-Asset Class Funds is calculated as the lesser of total security purchases or sales in the Fund over the period, divided by the average net asset value (NAV) of the Fund. Cash, cash equivalents and short-term government securities are not included.

12 month name turnover for the Orbis Equity and Multi-Asset Class Funds is calculated as the number of positions held by the Fund at the start of the period but no longer held at the end of the period, divided by the total number of positions held by the Fund at the start of the period.

Active share is a measure of the extent to which the holdings of the Orbis Equity and Balanced Funds differ from their respective benchmark's holdings. It is calculated by summing the absolute value of the differences of the weight of each individual security in the specific Orbis Fund, versus the weight of each holding in the respective benchmark index, and dividing by two. For the Balanced Funds, three calculations of active share are disclosed. The Portfolio active share incorporates the equity, fixed income, commodity-linked and other securities (as applicable) held by the Orbis Fund and compares those to the holdings of the composite benchmark. The Equity and Fixed Income active shares are calculated as if the equity and fixed income portions of the Orbis Funds are independent funds; each of those two sets of holdings is separately compared to the fully-weighted holdings in the appropriate component of the composite benchmark. Although the Balanced Funds hedge stock and bond market exposure, the active share calculations are "gross" and not adjusted to reflect the hedging in place at any point in time.

Benchmark related information is as at the date of production based on data provided by the official benchmark and/or third party data providers. There may be timing differences between the date at which data is captured and reported.

The total expense ratio has been calculated using the expenses, excluding trading costs, and average net assets for the 12 month period ending 30 June 2026.

Orbis SICAV Funds: The Fund expenses exclude portfolio transaction costs. The performance related management fee becomes payable to Orbis on each Dealing Day as defined in the Funds' Prospectus.
