Commentary

As contrarian investment managers, we are said to be "comfortable being uncomfortable". This does not mean that our analysts lie on a bed of nails for relaxation; it means that we are relatively at ease investing in stocks and sectors that are out of favour. The converse of this is that we get uncomfortable when we are in line with the consensus. Now might appear to be one of those times, with your Fund overweight the Technology sector and overweight Greater China – neither of which are particularly contrarian themes. But top-down perceptions can be misleading. The Fund is only fractionally overweight the Technology sector in North America. About half of the overweight Technology exposure comes from China and Taiwan – and it is in names that are barely recognisable to most investors. It is these offbeat holdings that also largely make up the Fund's positioning in Greater China, not the telecoms, energy and financials that dominate those markets.

Collective Investment Schemes (CIS) are generally medium to long-term investments. The value of participatory interests may go down as well as up and past performance is not necessarily a guide to the future. Fluctuations or movements in exchange rates may cause the value of underlying international investments to go up or down. CIS are traded at ruling prices and can engage in borrowing and scrip lending. A schedule of fees and charges and maximum commissions is available on request from Allan Gray Unit Trust Management Limited, a member of the Association for Savings & Investments SA. Commission and incentives may be paid by investors to third parties and if so, would be included in the overall costs. The Fund is priced weekly. Figures quoted are for the periods indicated for a $10 investment, using NAV-NAV prices, with income distributions reinvested. Performance is quoted in US dollar currency terms. A prospectus is available on request from Allan Gray Unit Trust Management Limited. Certain capitalised terms are defined in the Prospectus. Returns are net of fees, include income and assume reinvestment of dividends.
