Commentary

As bottom-up stockpickers, we spend very little time thinking about short-term trends or making macroeconomic forecasts. But we can't ignore events like Japan's 11 March earthquake and tsunami. The TOPIX lost more than 16% of its market value in the two trading sessions following the earthquake. In our view, this far exceeded the long-term damage to the intrinsic value of the country's businesses, so we added to a number of your Fund's Japanese holdings and held firm in others in the face of panic selling. But these were not "top-down" decisions. We believed that many of these companies were undervalued before the earthquake, and the sudden sell-off made their shares even more attractive. We can't predict with precision the earthquake's complete longer-term impact on the Japanese stockmarket, but we believe the Bank of Japan's aggressive monetary response is potentially positive for share prices.
