

Our Thinking

Earlier this month, we shared the sad news of our founder Allan Gray's passing. Allan had an immeasurable impact on many lives as an entrepreneur, investor, and philanthropist. For his full obituary, please follow this link.

Allan's most enduring legacy for clients may be the efforts that he took to ensure that the firm would remain in excellent hands for many generations to come. A meticulous planner, Allan handed over the leadership of Orbis to William Gray in 2000 and stepped away from his remaining investment responsibilities in 2012. Before retiring from Orbis in 2016, Allan established the Allan & Gill Gray Foundation, endowed with his family's controlling stake in the Orbis and Allan Gray groups.

Allan knew that an investment firm's ownership structure is critical to its ability to act in the best interests of clients. The greatest investment opportunities tend to arise at moments of maximum pressure, when clients, the investment team, and even the owners of the firm are all under extreme stress. In particular, having an ownership structure that is supportive during periods of prolonged underperformance ensures that managers don't capitulate at the bottom of the cycle.

Nearly 20 years ago, at a time when Orbis was under extreme pressure, we wrote the passage below in our Global Equity Fund commentary:

We select equities with a value orientation, which entails investing in shares that are priced attractively relative to our assessment of their intrinsic value. Critical to our appraisal of a company's intrinsic value is its prospective earnings growth rate. However, we will not pay an excessive price, even for superior earnings growth. The discipline of buying growth only at a reasonable price tends to work well in most stockmarket environments and to reward patient Members. However, when investors become caught up in the exuberance of surging stockmarkets, the prices of the "glamour" shares that have led the market are sometimes bid up well beyond fair value. In such circumstances, we do not expose you to these shares at prices we cannot justify, and it is hard for your Fund to match the World Index.

31 December 1999

Every word rings true today. Back then, the bubble in so-called "TMT"—technology, media and telecommunications—shares was rapidly inflating and stockmarket returns were driven by a narrow group of winners with seemingly unstoppable momentum. The fear of being left behind in the New Economy gold rush caused both small investors and professionals alike to chase the best-performing shares at any price. As an example, shares of Cisco Systems, whose servers and other equipment powered the growth of the Internet, were trading at more than 150 times earnings. Many "value" investors threw in the towel and became "growth" investors at the worst possible time.

Today value is once again out of fashion. Fear of missing out has been replaced by extreme risk aversion. As discussed in our recent commentaries, consumer staples shares such as Nestlé and Kikkoman have replaced Cisco as our favourite examples of excessive valuation. While the names have changed—and the current environment is less extreme than the peak of the TMT bubble—the pattern is familiar. So is our response. Thanks to the structure that Allan put in place and his efforts to develop successive generations of disciplined investment decision-makers, clients can be certain that we will remain true to the message of another Orbis Global commentary from that era:

In conclusion, we recognise that our stance opens us to the criticisms of being stubborn and incapable of appreciating the dynamics of a new era. Only time will tell but we are convinced that the future will prove that we are instead displaying the courage of our convictions under conditions of extreme stress and hence greatest opportunity. The majority of the financial assets of the senior executives of Orbis are invested in the Orbis Funds. Nothing would bring us greater satisfaction than to reward our clients for their continuing support and patience during these most trying times.

Fund Objective and Benchmark

The Fund is designed for investors who have made the “asset allocation” decision to invest a predetermined amount in global equities. It seeks higher returns than the average of the world’s equity markets, without greater risk of loss. The Fund aims for higher returns than a designated equity performance benchmark, namely the FTSE World Index, including income and before the deduction of withholding taxes.

How We Aim to Achieve the Fund’s Objective/Adherence to Objective

The Fund is actively managed and seeks to remain fully invested in and exposed to global stockmarkets. It invests in equities considered to offer superior fundamental value. These equities are selected using extensive proprietary investment research. Orbis devotes a substantial proportion of its business efforts to detailed “bottom up” investment research conducted with a long-term perspective, believing that such research makes superior long-term performance attainable. The lower the price of a share as compared to its assessed intrinsic value, the more attractive Orbis considers the equity’s fundamental value. The Investment Manager believes that over the long term, equity investing based on this approach offers superior returns and reduces the risk of loss.

Exchange rate fluctuations significantly influence global investment returns. For this reason, part of Orbis’ research effort is devoted to forecasting currency trends. Taking into account these expected trends, Orbis actively reviews the Fund’s currency exposure. In doing so, Orbis places particular focus on managing the Fund’s exposure to those currencies considered less likely to hold their long-term value. The Fund’s currency deployment therefore frequently differs significantly from the geographic deployment of its selected equities.

The Fund does not seek to mirror its benchmark but may instead deviate meaningfully from it in pursuit of superior long-term capital appreciation.

Since inception, the Fund has outperformed its benchmark net of fees. The Fund will experience periods of underperformance in pursuit of its objective of creating long-term wealth for investors.

Risk/Reward Profile

- The Fund is designed for investors who have made the “asset allocation” decision to invest a predetermined amount in global equities.
- Investments in the Fund may suffer capital loss.
- Investors should understand that the Investment Manager generally assesses an equity investment’s attractiveness using a three-to-five year time horizon.

Management Fee

As is described in more detail in the Fund’s Prospectus, the Fund pays the Investment Manager a performance-based fee. The fee is designed to align the Investment Manager’s interests with those of investors in the Fund.

The fee is based on the net asset value of the Fund. The fee rate is calculated weekly by comparing the Fund’s performance over three years against its benchmark. For each percentage point of three year performance above or below that benchmark’s performance, 0.04 percentage points are added to or subtracted from 1.5%, subject to the following limits:

- Maximum fee: 2.5% per annum
- Minimum fee: 0.5% per annum

Fees, Expenses and Total Expense Ratio (TER)

In addition to the fees payable to its Investment Manager, the Fund bears operating costs, including the costs of maintaining its stock exchange listing, Bermuda government fees, legal and auditing fees, reporting expenses, the cost of preparing its Prospectus and communication costs. Finally, the Fund incurs costs when buying or selling underlying investments.

Where an investor subscribes or redeems an amount representing 5% or more of the net asset value of the Fund, the Investment Manager may cause the Fund to levy a fee of 0.40% of the net asset value of the Fund’s shares being acquired or redeemed.

The annual management fees charged are included in the TER. The TER is a measure of the actual expenses incurred by the Fund over a 12 month period, excluding trading costs. Since Fund returns are quoted after deduction of these expenses, the TER should not be deducted from the published returns. Expenses may vary, so the current TER is not a reliable indicator of future TERs.

Notes to Help You Understand This Report

Certain capitalised terms are defined in the Glossary section of the Orbis Funds' respective Prospectuses, copies of which are available upon request from Allan Gray Unit Trust Management (RF) Proprietary Limited, a Member of the Association for Savings & Investments SA. The country and currency classification for equity securities follows that of third party benchmark providers for comparability purposes. Based on a number of factors including the location of the underlying business, Orbis may consider a security's classification to be different and manage the Funds' exposures accordingly. Totals presented in this Report may not sum due to rounding.

Risk measures are ex-post and calculated on a monthly return series. Months to recovery measures the number of months from the preceding peak in performance to recovery of that level of performance.

12 month portfolio turnover for the Orbis Equity and Multi-Asset Class Funds is calculated as the lesser of total security purchases or sales in the Fund over the period, divided by the average net asset value (NAV) of the Fund. Short-term fixed income instruments are not included.

12 month name turnover for the Orbis Equity and Multi-Asset Class Funds is calculated as the number of positions held by the Fund at the start of the period but no longer held at the end of the period, divided by the total number of positions held by the Fund at the start of the period. Short-term fixed income instruments are not included.

Active share is a measure of how actively managed the Orbis Equity Funds are. It is calculated by summing the absolute value of the differences of the weight of each individual stock in the specific Orbis Fund, versus the weight of each holding in the respective benchmark index, and dividing by two.

The total expense ratio has been calculated using the expenses, excluding trading costs, and average net assets for the 12 month period ending 30 November 2019.
