

Orbis Global Equity

The heady days of the “Everything Bubble” of 2021 now seem like a distant memory. Global equities have declined over 20% in US dollars since the start of the year, and the most speculative areas of the market have seen far steeper losses. That said, global markets still do not look particularly cheap and there are plenty of real-world risks weighing on both sentiment and fundamentals—rampant inflation, war in Ukraine, and an energy crisis, to name just a few.

Despite this backdrop, we are enthusiastic about the opportunities for bottom-up stock selection. To put things in perspective, the chart below shows that US stockmarkets are still in the midst of a historic dislocation. The dark blue line shows the relative performance of US “value” stocks versus their “growth” counterparts. When the dark blue line is rising—as it has for almost 100 years—it means that value shares are outperforming. For more than a decade, however, it has been a painful time to be a value-oriented investor.

Value stocks remain in the midst of their largest drawdown in nearly 100 years

Relative return of US value vs growth shares, 1926 to Sep 2022

Source: Kenneth French, Center for Research in Security Prices, Orbis. Relative return series calculated from the weekly return of US high book-to-price portfolio less the return of US low book-to-price portfolio, large- and small- cap shares, rebased to 1 at Jul 1926.

Although we are not beholden to any particular style of investing—be it “value” or otherwise—the behaviour of value shares tends to be a reasonably good proxy for our opportunity set. As contrarians, we are naturally drawn to areas of the market that are out of favour and thus potentially undervalued. The much harder part is waiting for others to share our enthusiasm. Until recently, many investors had an insatiable appetite for growth and were willing to pay almost any price for it. As the green line above shows, the past 18-24 months have been a refreshing change, with value roaring back into fashion.

What’s most exciting about the chart is that we believe value still has a long way to go. This explains our continued enthusiasm and our positioning in our Global Equity Strategy. We are in a period where the portfolio has a stronger tilt in the direction of value than any other time in its history, with the exception of the dotcom bubble in the late 1990s. In our past two quarterly commentaries, we have written about a number of examples in energy and materials such as Shell, Teck Resources and Vale. Despite strong performance amid a resurgence in commodity prices, these shares—which make up about 20% of the portfolio—still trade at very low multiples of earnings and cash flow.

While energy and mining shares would be considered classic “value” stocks by almost any definition, we are also finding compelling value in very different types of businesses. Two of our largest holdings, Global Payments and Fleetcor Technologies, provide an illustration. We sometimes refer to them as “quality cyclicals”, which is to say that they are excellent businesses, but they also come with exposure to the ups and downs of the broader economy. As long-term investors, that’s just fine with us. In the short term, cycles can produce buying opportunities when others are pessimistic, while the underlying quality of the businesses gives us the confidence needed to wait patiently for sentiment to improve over the longer term.

Global Payments provides merchants—often small and medium-sized businesses (SMBs)—with a platform to process credit and debit card transactions. When we began looking at the company last year, its shares were deeply out of favour. Payment providers are generally paid a “take rate”—a percentage of each transaction processed—and the pandemic was a major blow to spending on many of the services and experiences provided by SMBs. At the same time, “disruptive” new competitors like Square (public) and Stripe (private) caught the imagination of many investors, and the “legacy” payment companies like Global Payments, and its peers FIS and Fiserv, were left behind.

As a result, Global Payments went from trading at a 30-50% premium to the S&P 500 prior to the pandemic to about a 30% discount today. There are valid reasons to be cautious. Like any technology, the payments space evolves rapidly and the competitive threat is real. And while SMBs may have begun to recover from the pandemic, discretionary spending may suffer yet again on fresh consumer fears about recession and the cost of living.

Still, we think Global Payments is trading at an excessively pessimistic valuation for a few reasons. The first is that current headwinds are likely to abate over the long term. While there may be more competition today than in the past, the overall industry “pie” is growing at 8-12% per annum as consumer spending and card penetration both rise. In recent quarters, Global Payments’ volume growth compares favourably to its peers and other networks, which suggests that they are not losing market share. And while times may remain tough for many individual small businesses, collectively they remain resilient.

A second reason for optimism is Global Payments’ software strategy. Under the leadership of CEO Jeff Sloan, the company has built, bought, or partnered with dozens of software solutions that are now bundled together with their payment processing services. Software is critical because it ultimately helps customers do a better job running their businesses, which in turn enables Global Payments to share in their success by earning higher fees. Once a software system is in place, customers are extremely reluctant to fix what isn’t broken. Renewal rates of about 95% are not uncommon—and the company’s software-centric strategy means that Global Payments’ customer base is much “stickier” than its competitors’.

A final reason is that Global Payments is expanding into business-to-business (B2B) payments. This is a much bigger market—about two-and-a-half times the total size of business-to-consumer (B2C) transactions—and nearly all B2B payment volume is dominated by paper cheques and bank transfers rather than credit or debit cards. Although this is a nascent area for Global Payments and they will need to demonstrate that they can execute, it significantly extends their future growth runway.

At less than 12 times our estimate of 2022 earnings per share, Global Payments offers exceptional value in our view. We believe that the business should be able to deliver earnings growth of 15-20% per annum over our investment horizon. While not part of our thesis, we also believe Global Payments—as one of the last remaining pure play payment providers of size in a consolidating industry—would be an attractive takeover target, especially in light of its current valuation.

As with Global Payments, Fleetcor shares have also suffered from SMB-related concerns. The company operates niche payment networks in fuel, lodging, tolls and corporate payments. They primarily enable SMB customers to control spending of company money on expenses and payments to suppliers. Importantly, many of these networks are two-sided, which means that Fleetcor controls both the payor and payee relationships. By adding value for both parties, Fleetcor makes money on both sides of the transaction.

As an example, imagine a local towing company whose truckers frequently need to buy fuel. Rather than giving those employees a general purpose credit card, Fleetcor issues “Fuelman” cards that allow the truckers to pay for fuel and other pre-approved expenses. On the other side of the network, Fleetcor has relationships with local gas stations that agree to accept the Fuelman card as payment. For the towing company owner, the cards reduce the risk of unauthorised expenses and make record-keeping vastly more efficient, while the gas station can count on a captive stream of business from the drivers.

B2B payments—which account for about a quarter of Fleetcor’s business—are another important long-term growth tailwind. The vast majority of these payments are still made with paper cheques or bank transfers. Fleetcor offers a suite of B2B services including accounts payable automation, virtual payment cards, and cross-border foreign exchange transactions. As such, Fleetcor is well-positioned at the nexus of several long-term trends in the digitisation of B2B payments—a bit like where the consumer payments space was 15-20 years ago.

Fleetcor is an excellent business with high profit margins, high returns on capital, and double-digit revenue growth. We believe earnings per share can grow approximately 20% per annum over the medium-to-long term. In addition, Fleetcor’s CEO Ron Clarke has a phenomenal track record of value creation. Clarke built the company over the past 20 years and continues to own 2.5% of the company today—currently worth approximately $350 million. Since Fleetcor’s IPO in 2010, the stock has risen sevenfold, driven by a combination of organic growth and savvy acquisitions. Clarke has deployed about $6 billion on more than 80 acquisitions, and we estimate that these deals have earned a 20%+ unlevered return on capital.

Looking ahead, Fleetcor still has a lot of dry powder, and we expect Clarke to put the equivalent of 40% of the company’s market cap to work in the coming years. At current prices, there may be few better targets than Fleetcor’s own stock, and we’ve been pleased to see management reducing the share count at a time when shares are trading below our assessment of intrinsic value. Fleetcor trades at 11 times forward earnings. Like Global Payments, it previously traded at a premium to the S&P 500 just a few years ago, but now trades at a discount that we believe is unwarranted.

Global Payments and Fleetcor are cheaper than the US market

Price-to-forward-earnings ratio, Global Payments, Fleetcor, and S&P 500, Jan 2019 to Sep 2022

Part of the reason for the discount is that Fleetcor shares have been tarred with the same brush as other legacy payment companies. But more specifically, investors have also been worried that electric vehicle adoption will threaten Fleetcor’s fuel card business. We think these concerns are overblown given that widespread electric vehicle adoption is still many years away, and even then, Fleetcor’s customers will still need to manage their charging expenses. In our view, the most likely scenario is that Fleetcor’s customers will operate mixed fleets during the transition and will need access to both gas pumps and charging stations.

It’s always exciting to be able to find shares of above-average businesses trading at below-average valuations. Global Payments and Fleetcor stand out as two—among many—such examples in the current portfolio, and we continue to believe this is an unusually attractive time to be a bottom-up stockpicker.

Fund Objective and Benchmark

The Fund is designed for investors who have made the “asset allocation” decision to invest a predetermined amount in global equities. It seeks higher returns than the average of the world’s equity markets, without greater risk of loss. A benchmark is used by the Fund for two purposes: performance comparison (the “Fund Benchmark”) and performance fee calculation (the “Performance Fee Benchmark”). The Fund Benchmark is the FTSE World Index, including income, before the deduction of withholding taxes (“FTSE World Index”). The Performance Fee Benchmark of the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) is the MSCI World Index, including income and after deduction of withholding taxes.

How We Aim to Achieve the Fund’s Objective/Adherence to Objective

The Fund is actively managed and seeks to remain virtually fully invested in and exposed to global stockmarkets. It invests in equities considered to offer superior fundamental value. These equities are selected using extensive proprietary investment research. Orbis devotes a substantial proportion of its business efforts to detailed “bottom up” investment research conducted with a long-term perspective, believing that such research makes superior long-term performance attainable. The lower the price of a share as compared to its assessed intrinsic value, the more attractive Orbis considers the equity’s fundamental value. The Investment Manager believes that over the long term, equity investing based on this approach offers superior returns and reduces the risk of loss. The Fund may, to the extent permitted by its investment restrictions, also periodically hold cash and cash equivalents when Orbis believes this to be consistent with the Fund’s investment objective.

Exchange rate fluctuations significantly influence global investment returns. For this reason, part of Orbis’ research effort is devoted to forecasting currency trends. Taking into account these expected trends, Orbis actively reviews the Fund’s currency exposure. In doing so, Orbis places particular focus on managing the Fund’s exposure to those currencies considered less likely to hold their long-term value. The Fund’s currency deployment therefore frequently differs significantly from the geographic deployment of its selected equities.

The Fund does not seek to mirror the Fund Benchmark but may instead deviate meaningfully from it in pursuit of superior long-term capital appreciation.

The net returns of the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) from its inception on 14 May 2020, stitched with the net returns of the Investor Share Class from the Fund’s inception to 14 May 2020, have outperformed the stitched Performance Fee Benchmarks of the respective classes. The Fund will experience periods of underperformance in pursuit of its long-term objective.

Management Fee

As is described in more detail in the Fund’s Prospectus, the Fund’s various share classes bear different management fees. The fees are designed to align the Investment Manager’s interests with those of investors in the Fund.

For an initial period of time, the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) is charging the fee of the Investor Share Class, reduced by 0.3% per annum, with reference to the FTSE World Index. Numerous investors have switched to the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) from the Investor Share Class. This temporary measure will ensure that the fees paid by investors account for underperformance experienced by the Investor Share Class before the inception date of the Shared Investor RRF Class (A). The fee of the Investor Share Class that is currently being charged to the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) is calculated as follows:

The fee rate is calculated weekly by comparing the Class’ performance over three years against the FTSE World Index. For each percentage point of three year performance above or below that benchmark’s performance, 0.04 percentage points are added to or deducted from 1.5%, subject to the following limits:

- Maximum fee: 2.5% per annum
- Minimum fee: 0.5% per annum

This fee is then reduced by 0.3% per annum. This 0.3% per annum reduction is provided because investors in the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) are subject to an additional administrative fee, as they separately agree with Allan Gray Proprietary Limited (or one of its affiliates) from time to time.

The Shared Investor RRF Class (A) will continue to charge the fee of the Investor Share Class, reduced by 0.3% per annum, with reference to the FTSE World Index until the earlier of the first dealing day (a) on or after 14 May 2023, or (b) on which the average management fee charged by the Investor Share Class equals or exceeds 1.5% per annum of the Investor Share Class’ net assets for the period ending on that dealing day and beginning on the later of (i) 12 months prior to that dealing day, or (ii) 14 May 2020. After this point, the Class’ management fee will instead be charged as follows:

- Base Fee: Calculated and accrued weekly at a rate of 0.8% per annum of the Class’ net asset value. Investors separately pay an administrative fee directly to Allan Gray Proprietary Limited or one of its affiliates. The Investment Manager or one of its affiliates is entitled to receive a separate fee from Allan Gray Proprietary Limited or one of its affiliates in connection with this administrative fee, related to services the Investment Manager and its affiliates provide to Allan Gray Proprietary Limited or its affiliates.
- Refundable Performance Fee: When the performance of the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) (after deducting the Base Fee and an additional 0.3% per annum, which is deemed to be representative of the aforementioned administrative fee) beats the Performance Fee Benchmark over the period from one dealing day to the next, 25% of the value of the outperformance is paid into a reserve and reinvested into the Fund. If the value of the reserve is positive on any dealing day, the Investment Manager is entitled to a performance fee in an amount capped at the lesser of an annualised rate of (a) one-third of the reserve’s net asset value and (b) 2.5% of the net asset value of the Shared Investor RRF Class (A). Fees paid from the reserve to the Investment Manager are not available to be refunded as described below.

When the performance of the Shared Investor RRF Class (A) (after deducting the Base Fee and the aforementioned additional 0.3% per annum) trails the Performance Fee Benchmark over the period from one dealing day to the next, 25% of the value of the underperformance is refunded from the reserve to the Shared Investor RRF Class (A). If at any time sufficient value does not exist in the reserve to provide the refund, a reserve recovery mark is set, and subsequent underperformance is tracked. Such relative losses must be recovered before any outperformance results in any payment to the reserve.

Please review the Fund’s prospectus for additional detail and for a description of the management fee borne by the Fund’s other share classes.

Fees, Expenses and Total Expense Ratio (TER)

In addition to the fees payable to its Investment Manager, the Fund bears operating costs, including the costs of maintaining its stock exchange listing, Bermuda government fees, legal and auditing fees, reporting expenses, the cost of preparing its Prospectus and communication costs. Finally, the Fund incurs costs when buying or selling underlying investments. Operating costs (excluding the Investment Manager’s fees, the cost of buying and selling assets, interest and brokerage charges and certain taxes) attributable to the Fund’s Shared Investor RRF Class (A) are currently capped at 0.15% per annum of the net asset value of that class.

Where an investor subscribes or redeems an amount representing 5% or more of the net asset value of the Fund, the Investment Manager may cause the Fund to levy a fee of 0.40% of the net asset value of the Fund’s shares being acquired or redeemed.

The annual management fees charged are included in the TER. The TER is a measure of the actual expenses incurred by the Class over a 12 month period, excluding trading costs. Since Fund and Class returns are quoted after deduction of these expenses, the TER should not be deducted from the published returns. Expenses may vary, so the current TER is not a reliable indicator of future TERs.

Risk/Reward Profile

- The Fund is designed for investors who have made the “asset allocation” decision to invest a predetermined amount in global equities.
- Investments in the Fund may suffer capital loss.
- Investors should understand that the Investment Manager generally assesses an equity investment’s attractiveness using a three-to-five year time horizon.

Fund Minimum

Minimum investment amounts in the Fund are specified in the Fund's Prospectus, provided that a new investor in the Orbis Funds must open an investment account with Orbis, which may be subject to minimum investment restrictions, country restrictions and/or other terms and conditions. For more information on opening an Orbis investment account, please visit www.orbis.com.

Clients investing via Allan Gray, which includes the Allan Gray Investment Platform, an Allan Gray investment pool or otherwise through Allan Gray Nominees, remain subject to the investment minimums specified by the applicable terms and conditions.

To allow comparison of returns to a common date we have extended the average equity and multi-asset class fund indices to reflect the subsequent movement of the applicable benchmark indices. Average fund returns are not shown for periods of a month or less as high price volatility and late fund reporting regularly cause them to be significantly restated by Morningstar.

Notes to Help You Understand This Report

Certain capitalised terms are defined in the Glossary section of the Orbis Funds' respective Prospectuses, copies of which are available upon request from Allan Gray Unit Trust Management (RF) Proprietary Limited, a Member of the Association for Savings & Investments SA. The country and currency classification for securities follows that of third-party providers for comparability purposes. Emerging Markets follows MSCI classification when available and includes Frontier Markets. Emerging Markets currency exposure is based on currency denomination. Based on a number of factors including the location of the underlying business, Orbis may consider a security's classification to be different and manage the Funds' exposures accordingly. Totals presented in this Report may not sum due to rounding.

Risk measures are ex-post and calculated on a monthly return series. Months to recovery measures the number of months from the preceding peak in performance to recovery of that level of performance.

12 month portfolio turnover for the Orbis Equity and Multi-Asset Class Funds is calculated as the lesser of total security purchases or sales in the Fund over the period, divided by the average net asset value (NAV) of the Fund. Short-term fixed income instruments and net current assets are not included.

12 month name turnover for the Orbis Equity and Multi-Asset Class Funds is calculated as the number of positions held by the Fund at the start of the period but no longer held at the end of the period, divided by the total number of positions held by the Fund at the start of the period. Net current assets are not included.

Active share is a measure of the extent to which the holdings of the Orbis Equity and Multi-Asset Class Funds differ from their respective benchmark's holdings. It is calculated by summing the absolute value of the differences of the weight of each individual security in the specific Orbis Fund, versus the weight of each holding in the respective benchmark index, and dividing by two. For the Multi-Asset Class Funds, three calculations of active share are disclosed. The Portfolio active share incorporates the equity, fixed income, commodity-linked and other securities (as applicable) held by the Orbis Fund and compares those to the holdings of the composite benchmark. The Equity and Fixed Income active shares are calculated as if the equity and fixed income portions of the Orbis Funds are independent funds; each of those two sets of holdings is separately compared to the fully-weighted holdings in the appropriate component of the composite benchmark. Although the Multi-Asset Class Funds hedge stock and bond market exposure, the active share calculations are "gross" and not adjusted to reflect the hedging in place at any point in time.

Benchmark related information is as at the date of production based on data provided by the official benchmark and/or third party data providers. There may be timing differences between the date at which data is captured and reported.

The total expense ratio has been calculated using the expenses, excluding trading costs, and average net assets for the 12 month period ending 30 September 2022.

Orbis SICAV Funds: The Fund expenses exclude portfolio transaction costs. The performance related management fee becomes payable to Orbis on each Dealing Day as defined in the Funds' Prospectus.

Additional Notices for Orbis SICAV Funds

This is a marketing communication as defined by the ESMA guidelines on marketing materials. You should consider the relevant offering documents including the Fund Prospectus and Key Investor Information document before making any final investment decisions. These offering documents are available in English on our website (www.orbis.com). Please refer to the respective Fund's Prospectus for full information on the risks associated with investing.

Investors in a SICAV Fund can obtain a summary of their investor rights in English on our website (www.orbis.com). When investing in the Orbis Funds an investor acquires shares within the Fund and not in the underlying assets held within the Fund. The return of your investment may change as a result of currency fluctuations if the return is calculated in a currency different from the currency shown in this Report.
