PORTFOLIO

Commentary

China has performed poorly relative to other stockmarkets this year, down about 7% year-to-date and 10% from its April high. This might be due in part to investor concerns about an overheating economy in China, which has recently given way to fears of a hard landing scenario. For some time, your Fund's Chinese holdings have been dominated by domestic consumer-oriented names, which are particularly sensitive to the outlook for the local economy. While these stock selections have added value for your Fund in the past, they have become a drag on performance of late. We continue to believe in China's long-term growth prospects and the massive potential of its emerging middle class. As a region, however, Asian markets have been – and will continue to be – characterised by persistent volatility. As such we believe our disciplined research process, patience and long-term perspective are of paramount importance.
