Commentary

China continues to have a large degree of influence on your Fund's performance. Last year, the Fund's holdings in China accounted for much of its outperformance, but many of the same stock selections have produced disappointing results of late. Although these positions are highly sensitive to short-term sentiment, we continue to believe that long-term trends in China appear positive, buoyed by a rapidly growing middle class. Accordingly, the Fund's Chinese positions are dominated by consumer-oriented stocks. A good example is NetEase, an online game operator representing 6.2% of the Fund's net assets. Though the online game industry carries significant risks, NetEase trades at 12 times estimated earnings per share, and has an extremely strong balance sheet. Despite current volatility in Asian markets, we believe our disciplined research process should continue to uncover plenty of long-term opportunities in the region.
