

Our Thinking

The tech sector is better known for its hype than its bargains. Exhibit number one is the FANGs—Facebook, Amazon, Netflix, and Google (Alphabet)—which have become famous market darlings.

We are value-oriented investors, and over the past year we have held three of the four FANGs. More broadly, the Orbis Global Equity Strategy is overweight the Information Technology sector. How do we reconcile this with our contrarian philosophy?

When we say “contrarian”, we don’t mean blindly betting against the crowd. That would be as clever as driving on the wrong side of the road. To us, contrarian investing is about looking at the world through a different lens and digging deep into the fundamentals to find hidden value.

Over our 28-year history, we have often concluded that selected technology shares were undervalued. In fact, the Orbis Global Equity Strategy has been overweight the technology sector for most of its history. Technology companies can offer rapid growth and high profitability, while technology stocks are subject to short cycles of extreme sentiment. This combination often creates substantial discounts to intrinsic value—exactly the kind of opportunity we like to exploit.

A good example is Amazon. In early 2017 we built a significant position in the stock because we believed that the market was significantly undervaluing the growth potential and efficiency gains within its e-commerce business. In addition, we believed that the value of its Amazon Web Services segment—the world’s largest provider of cloud services, including almost all of Netflix’s backend infrastructure—was vastly underappreciated. Finally, we felt the long-term value of Amazon’s nascent advertising business was only beginning to be realised.

Sentiment can change quickly in technology, and it wasn’t long before the market’s expectations for growth and margin expansion had risen to a level where the business was no longer cheap compared to our view of its intrinsic value. While we were prepared to invest in Amazon for the long haul, we exited the position in late 2017 as our thesis unfolded more quickly than expected.

We are not always so lucky. In December, we spoke about Symantec, one of the world’s largest cybersecurity firms, which is a top 10 holding in the Orbis Global Equity Strategy. In early May, Symantec’s stock price plummeted almost 35% in a single day on the news that the board’s audit committee was investigating accounting concerns raised by a former employee. When the company held a belated Q&A the following week, they provided reassurance that the impact would not be material, and the stock recovered slightly. This suggests that the market’s knee-jerk reaction may have been extreme. Based on what we know at this stage, Symantec shares continue to trade below our assessment of intrinsic value. However, the situation is fluid and only time will tell if our view is correct.

One of our newer holdings is Facebook, which is now a top 10 position in the Orbis Global Equity Strategy. Facebook users and shareholders alike were spooked to learn about the allegations that Cambridge Analytica may have obtained private data from around 87 million Facebook accounts. Facebook’s share price fell by about 20% following this news.

While this has been a major embarrassment for the company, we believe the market reaction has been excessive. If anything, greater regulatory scrutiny could actually yield some long-run benefits for the core business. If Facebook is prohibited from sharing its data with third parties, it may develop new methods of engagement that can produce greater opportunities to monetise its collection of differentiated, high-quality assets. These include Facebook, Instagram, and WhatsApp—all of which benefit from strong network effects. People want to join the social networks with the most users and companies want their ads to be seen by the most potential customers.

Facebook ticks both boxes. Along with Google, these two players alone account for more than 80% of global spending (excluding China) on digital ads. This creates another powerful feedback loop—the more ads, the more data on what works, and in turn the more compelling the experience becomes for both advertisers and users. As digital ad spending continues to grow, we believe that Facebook can grow the average revenue per user it generates through advertising. Additionally, we think that the market underappreciates the long-term monetisation potential of Instagram and WhatsApp.

These tepid expectations are reflected in the price. Facebook’s valuation today is only slightly more expensive than the average stock in the S&P 500, but we expect it to compound earnings over the next five years at a much greater rate than the market. We have long been bullish on the company’s prospects and have owned the shares at various times since our initial purchase in 2013. More recently, after a period of sideways performance, we welcomed the opportunity to buy back into the shares.

More broadly, we expect that the technology sector will remain a rich source of idiosyncratic opportunities to purchase stocks at a discount to intrinsic value—just as it has been in the past.

Fund Objective and Benchmark

The Fund seeks higher returns than the average of the equity stock markets of the world's emerging market countries, without greater risk of loss. The MSCI Emerging Markets Index, including income net of withholding tax, is the Fund's benchmark (the "MSCI Emerging Markets Index"). This index also includes exposure to the currencies associated with its constituent stockmarkets. The mix of currencies in the MSCI Emerging Markets Index is the Fund's "currency benchmark". The currency benchmark represents the mix of currencies in which the Fund would invest if the Investment Manager were impartial between all currencies. In practice, the Fund's currency exposure is managed relative to the currency benchmark.

How We Aim to Achieve the Fund's Objective/Adherence to Objective

The Fund is actively managed and is designed to remain continuously invested in, and exposed to all the risks and rewards of, selected Emerging Market equities. The Fund expects to be not less than 90% invested in Emerging Market equity and equity-linked investments. The Fund identifies Emerging Market equity and equity-linked investments as those investments that are issued by a corporate body or other entity domiciled or primarily located in a country represented in the MSCI Emerging Markets Index or the MSCI Frontier Markets Index (together, "Emerging Markets"), traded or listed on an exchange in an Emerging Market or issued by a corporate body or other entity whose business is significantly linked to Emerging Markets. These equities are selected using extensive proprietary investment research undertaken by the Investment Manager and its investment advisors. Orbis devotes a substantial proportion of its business efforts to detailed "bottom up" investment research conducted with a long-term perspective, believing that such research makes superior long-term performance attainable.

The lower the price of a share as compared to its assessed intrinsic value, the more attractive Orbis considers the equity's fundamental value. The Investment Manager believes that over the long term, equity investing based on this approach offers superior returns and reduces the risk of loss.

Exchange rate fluctuations significantly influence global investment returns. For this reason, part of Orbis' research effort is devoted to forecasting currency trends. Taking into account these expected trends, the Investment Manager actively reviews the Fund's currency exposure and may therefore use forward currency contracts to provide protection against exchange risks in the context of the management of its assets and liabilities.

The Fund does not seek to mirror the MSCI Emerging Markets Index and may deviate meaningfully from it in pursuit of superior long-term capital appreciation.

Since inception and over the latest ten-year period, the Fund has outperformed its benchmark net of fees. The Fund will experience periods of underperformance in pursuit of its objective of creating long-term wealth for investors.

Risk/Reward Profile

- The Fund is aimed at investors who are seeking a portfolio the objective of which is to be invested in, and exposed to, Emerging Market securities.
- Investments in the Fund may suffer capital loss.
- Investors should understand that the Investment Manager generally assesses an equity investment's attractiveness using a three-to-five year time horizon.

Management Fee

As is described in more detail in the Fund's Prospectus, the Fund's various share classes bear different management fees. The fees are designed to align the Manager's and Investment Manager's interests with those of investors in the Fund. With respect to the Fund's Investor Share Class, the fee is structured as follows: a fee is charged based on the net asset value of the class. The fee rate is calculated weekly by comparing the class' performance over three years against the MSCI All Country Asia ex Japan (Net) (US$) Index prior to 1 November 2016 and against the MSCI Emerging Markets Index thereafter. For each percentage point of three year performance above or below that benchmark's performance, 0.04 percentage points are added to or deducted from 1.5%, subject to the following limits:

- Maximum fee: 2.5% per annum
- Minimum fee: 0.5% per annum

For a description of the management fee borne by the Fund's other share classes, please refer to the Fund's Prospectus.

Fees, Expenses and Total Expense Ratio (TER)

The relevant class within the Fund bears all expenses payable by such class, which shall include but not be limited to fees payable to its Manager, Investment Manager and additional service providers, fees and expenses involved in registering and maintaining governmental registrations, taxes, duties and all other operating expenses, including the cost of buying and selling assets.

Where an investor subscribes or redeems an amount representing 5% or more of the net asset value of the Fund, the Manager may cause the Fund to levy a fee of 0.75% of the net asset value of the Fund shares being acquired or redeemed.

The annual management fees charged are included in the TER. The TER is a measure of the actual expenses incurred by the class over a 12 month period, excluding trading costs. Since Fund returns are quoted after deduction of these expenses, the TER should not be deducted from the published returns. Expenses may vary, so the current TER is not a reliable indicator of future TERs.

Returns are net of Investor Share Class fees, include income and assume reinvestment of dividends. Figures quoted are for the periods indicated for a $10,000 investment (lump sum, for illustrative purposes only). Annualised returns show the average amount earned on an investment in the Fund/share class each year over the given time period. This Report does not constitute advice nor a recommendation to buy, sell or hold, nor an offer to sell or a solicitation to buy interests or shares in the Orbis Funds or other securities in the companies mentioned in it.

Collective Investment Schemes (CIS) are generally medium to long-term investments. The value of an investment in the Fund may go down as well as up, and past performance is not a reliable indicator of future results. Neither the Manager nor the Investment Manager provides any guarantee with respect to capital or the Fund's returns. CIS are traded at ruling prices and can engage in borrowing and scrip lending. Commission and incentives may be paid by investors to third parties and, if so, would be included in the overall costs. Individual investors' performance may differ as a result of investment date, reinvestment date and dividend withholding tax, as well as a levy that may apply in the case of transactions representing more than 5% of the Fund's net asset value. The Fund may be closed to new investments at any time in order to be managed in accordance with its mandate. The Fund invests in foreign securities. Depending on their markets, trading in those securities may carry risks relating to, among others, macroeconomic and political circumstances, constraints on liquidity or the repatriation of funds, foreign exchange rate fluctuations, taxation and trade settlement.
