

Our Thinking

There are few guarantees in investing. Yet we can make one: in the future, as in the past, there will be periods when we underperform. We are in one such period now in several Strategies, including our Global Equity Strategy, which is illustrative given its breadth.

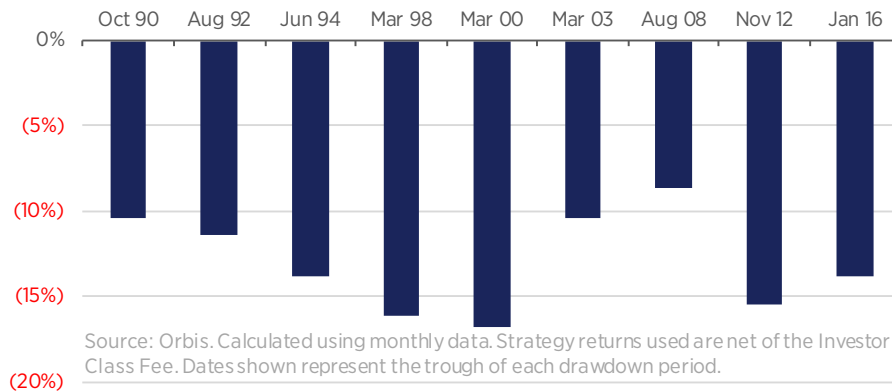

These periods are a normal part of our approach, but as co-investors in the Funds, we know that doesn't make them any more comfortable. This discomfort, however, is one reason why our approach can add value over the long term. Markets reward investors who can be patient and control their emotions. Put differently, contrarian investing works because it hurts.

Underperformance is a normal part of active investing

In April, we wrote that volatility in absolute returns is a normal part of investing. Absolute returns are our focus when we think about risk, and ultimately they matter most. But we also spend time thinking about relative returns—how the Funds are performing compared to their benchmarks. With our active approach, the Funds' portfolios look very different from their benchmarks, and with very different portfolios, their returns necessarily trace very different paths. Inevitably, the benchmark's path sometimes looks better.

Underperformance is normal: we have seen nine worse periods

Worst peak-to-trough drawdowns in the relative return of the Orbis Global Equity Strategy vs the FTSE World Index, Jan 1990 to Jul 2018

The current underperformance (~8% since 31 Jan) in the Global Equity Strategy is normal in the context of its history. As the chart shows, the Strategy has experienced nine worse periods since its inception in 1990—about one every three years on average. In each case, returns recovered and the Strategy reached a new high of outperformance.

What can we take from this? For one, performance can get worse. Though our stock selections were ultimately vindicated, performance in the run-up to the tech bubble in 2000 was painful indeed. But perhaps more importantly, the chart confirms that underperformance is an inevitable feature of our approach.

Another feature of our approach is that, in good times and bad, we expect our performance to be driven by our individual stock selections. That has been the case recently. Just four shares, each of which is held in at least one other Strategy, explain most of the Global Equity Strategy's year-to-date underperformance:

Shares of Symantec, a cybersecurity software developer, fell 33% after an announcement about an internal accounting investigation. As we wrote in May, the company subsequently offered reassurance that the financial impact would not be material, but the episode has left investors feeling uncertain.

NetEase is a long-held Chinese online game and internet company. The stock dropped amid market volatility in February, then again in May as the company reported lower margins due to increased marketing investments. Supportive of the long-term strategy, we bought more at various prices as the stock fell 16% from its pre-results level. It has since recovered much of its May decline.

Arconic's stock sold off when the aerospace parts maker cut its profit guidance in late April. This month, it recovered most of that drop on reports that private equity firms have offered to buy the company. It appears we aren't alone in thinking that Arconic trades at an attractive discount to its true long-term value.

Most publicly, Facebook shares fell nearly 20% the day after the company forecasted lower growth and margins than investors expected. Before the earnings call, the stock had been the Global Equity Strategy's biggest contributor to year-to-date returns; it is now a detractor.

In every case, our response is the same. We continue to apply our disciplined approach, analysing each business to judge whether it trades at an attractive discount to its true value. And at all times, we retain a long-term perspective.

The reward for patience

Periodic underperformance isn't unique to us. Earlier this year, our sister firm Allan Gray Australia performed a fascinating thought experiment. What if you knew which fund would be the best performer over the next five years? And what if you could pick the winner every five years for as long as you invest? Armed with this perfect foresight, an investor could have achieved nearly double the Australian market's annualised return over 35 years, leaving them with more than 14 times the final wealth of an index investment. But along the way, they would've gone through some deeply uncomfortable periods. More than once, they went four years without outperforming, and at times, they underperformed the market by as much as 39%. The lesson? At its best, active management can make an enormous difference for investors. But realising that difference requires patience.

Fund Objective and Benchmark

The Fund seeks higher returns than the average of the equity stock markets of the world's emerging market countries, without greater risk of loss. The MSCI Emerging Markets Index, including income net of withholding tax, is the Fund's benchmark (the "MSCI Emerging Markets Index"). This index also includes exposure to the currencies associated with its constituent stockmarkets. The mix of currencies in the MSCI Emerging Markets Index is the Fund's "currency benchmark". The currency benchmark represents the mix of currencies in which the Fund would invest if the Investment Manager were impartial between all currencies. In practice, the Fund's currency exposure is managed relative to the currency benchmark.

How We Aim to Achieve the Fund's Objective/Adherence to Objective

The Fund is actively managed and is designed to remain continuously invested in, and exposed to all the risks and rewards of, selected Emerging Market equities. The Fund expects to be not less than 90% invested in Emerging Market equity and equity-linked investments. The Fund identifies Emerging Market equity and equity-linked investments as those investments that are issued by a corporate body or other entity domiciled or primarily located in a country represented in the MSCI Emerging Markets Index or the MSCI Frontier Markets Index (together, "Emerging Markets"), traded or listed on an exchange in an Emerging Market or issued by a corporate body or other entity whose business is significantly linked to Emerging Markets. These equities are selected using extensive proprietary investment research undertaken by the Investment Manager and its investment advisors. Orbis devotes a substantial proportion of its business efforts to detailed "bottom up" investment research conducted with a long-term perspective, believing that such research makes superior long-term performance attainable.

The lower the price of a share as compared to its assessed intrinsic value, the more attractive Orbis considers the equity's fundamental value. The Investment Manager believes that over the long term, equity investing based on this approach offers superior returns and reduces the risk of loss.

Exchange rate fluctuations significantly influence global investment returns. For this reason, part of Orbis' research effort is devoted to forecasting currency trends. Taking into account these expected trends, the Investment Manager actively reviews the Fund's currency exposure and may therefore use forward currency contracts to provide protection against exchange risks in the context of the management of its assets and liabilities.

The Fund does not seek to mirror the MSCI Emerging Markets Index and may deviate meaningfully from it in pursuit of superior long-term capital appreciation.

Since inception and over the latest ten-year period, the Fund has outperformed its benchmark net of fees. The Fund will experience periods of underperformance in pursuit of its objective of creating long-term wealth for investors.

Risk/Reward Profile

- The Fund is aimed at investors who are seeking a portfolio the objective of which is to be invested in, and exposed to, Emerging Market securities.
- Investments in the Fund may suffer capital loss.
- Investors should understand that the Investment Manager generally assesses an equity investment's attractiveness using a three-to-five year time horizon.

Management Fee

As is described in more detail in the Fund's Prospectus, the Fund's various share classes bear different management fees. The fees are designed to align the Manager's and Investment Manager's interests with those of investors in the Fund. With respect to the Fund's Investor Share Class, the fee is structured as follows: a fee is charged based on the net asset value of the class. The fee rate is calculated weekly by comparing the class' performance over three years against the MSCI All Country Asia ex Japan (Net) (US$) Index prior to 1 November 2016 and against the MSCI Emerging Markets Index thereafter. For each percentage point of three year performance above or below that benchmark's performance, 0.04 percentage points are added to or deducted from 1.5%, subject to the following limits:

- Maximum fee: 2.5% per annum
- Minimum fee: 0.5% per annum

For a description of the management fee borne by the Fund's other share classes, please refer to the Fund's Prospectus.

Fees, Expenses and Total Expense Ratio (TER)

The relevant class within the Fund bears all expenses payable by such class, which shall include but not be limited to fees payable to its Manager, Investment Manager and additional service providers, fees and expenses involved in registering and maintaining governmental registrations, taxes, duties and all other operating expenses, including the cost of buying and selling assets.

Where an investor subscribes or redeems an amount representing 5% or more of the net asset value of the Fund, the Manager may cause the Fund to levy a fee of 0.75% of the net asset value of the Fund shares being acquired or redeemed.

The annual management fees charged are included in the TER. The TER is a measure of the actual expenses incurred by the class over a 12 month period, excluding trading costs. Since Fund returns are quoted after deduction of these expenses, the TER should not be deducted from the published returns. Expenses may vary, so the current TER is not a reliable indicator of future TERs.
