PORTFOLIO

Commentary

As the saying goes, "there are many ways to skin a cat," and there are also many ways to pursue a balanced mandate. One might invest across all the traditionally defensive industries, or seek safety in shares that enjoy benign sentiment. We focus on valuation, and this has led us to invest about a fifth of your Fund in telecommunications-related shares. As a group, the portfolio's telecommunications holdings have produced a yield in line with other defensive industries, while offering lower valuations and greater potential for dividend growth. Our focus on valuation has also uncovered a number of attractive banking and insurance stocks, and this is reflected in your Fund's 18% weighting in financials. Though these shares were not regarded as especially risky before the Global Financial Crisis, the death or near-death experiences of some of the biggest banks and insurers have soured sentiment. But in our view, that very pessimism—and the resulting low valuations—is what makes them less risky.
