Commentary

As bottom-up stockpickers we spend the vast majority of our time looking for undervalued shares on a case-by-case basis. That said, it is natural for that selection process to yield distinct exposures at the portfolio level. For example, your Fund's aggregate exposure to companies that benefit from yen weakness has been less than that of the benchmark TOPIX index for some time. This under-exposure is now less extreme as a result of opportunistic additions to holdings in companies such as INPEX and Toyota Motor which are net beneficiaries of a weaker yen. Of course, we have no better insight than anyone else on the direction of the yen or the Japanese stockmarket. But valuations in Japan are about as cheap as we have ever seen and we have a high degree of conviction that shares held in your Fund trade well below our assessment of their intrinsic value.
